A Wall of Chi John Masciangelo

The Unknown, the Danger, the Hunt, the Cruise. Zeke, a young, clueless kid in the late 1970's zealously launches into fiery and unknown territory, that of the hunting grounds, the cruising zone, wearing masks and dusting tracks to shield an alternate existence from friends, family and society at large. As the years pass, the fleeting, racy hunger of Lust clashes with his longing for the enduring and devout love of a deep rooted relationship. From Provincetown to Taos, and San Francisco to South Beach, Zeke searches for answers, desperately trying to grasp inherent meaning to a chaotic script for life. He strives to embrace a more evolved disposition as middle-age creeps closer in this gripping, karmically infused, gay coming-of-age work of creative nonfiction. The Trespassers, a vast array of competing subliminal energies, such as Lust, Fear, Reason and Wisdom, act out the given script on the psycho-emotional Battlefield of the mind. Often triggering hedonistically-charged behavior via spirited and erotic adventures, the Trespassers consistently muddle Zeke's ardent attempts to achieve clarity of purpose and an enlightened state of being, ultimately delivering the definitive truth of Impermanence.
