Champ de Mars (Electric Literature's Recommended Reading Book 119) Mireille Silcoff

"Eudora Welty once wrote: "Some stories leave a train of light behind them, meteor-like, so that much later than they strike our eye we may see their meaning like an after-effect." That describes the experience of reading Silcoff's stories: they possess a distinct visual and psychological resonance that imprints itself upon the mind long after you've finished reading. As only the very best writing can."

- Janice Zawerbny (Foreward), Senior Editor, Canadian Fiction, House of Anansi Press

About the Author: Mireille Silcoff's debut short story collection, Chez l'Arabe, was published in August by House of Anansi. Her writing has appeared in The New York Times Magazine, The Walrus, and The National Post, where she writes a weekly column. She is the founding editor of Guilt & Pleasure Quarterly, a magazine of Jewish writing and ideas. The recipient of two National Magazine Awards, she lives in Montreal.

About the Guest Editor: House of Anansi Press was founded in 1967 by writers Dennis Lee and David Godfrey. Anansi started as a small press with a mandate to publish Canadian writers, and quickly gained attention for publishing authors such as Margaret Atwood, Matt Cohen, Michael Ondaatje, and Erin Moure, as well as George Grant and Northrop Frye. French-Canadian works in translation have always been an important part of the list, and prominent Anansi authors in translation include Roch Carrier, Marie-Claire Blais, and France Daigle. Today, the company specializes in finding and developing Canadian writers of literary fiction, poetry, and nonfiction, and in maintaining the culturally significant backlist that has accumulated in the decades since the house was founded.

About the publisher: Electric Literature is an independent publisher amplifying the power of storytelling through digital innovation. Electric Literature's weekly fiction magazine, Recommended Reading, invites established authors, indie presses, and literary magazines to recommend great fiction. Once a month we feature our own recommendation of original, previously unpublished fiction.
