A Marriage Sourcebook (Sourcebook Anthologies) Joni Reiff Gibley, Kevin Charles Gibley, J. Robert Baker

Because marriage, like all sacraments, enacts the words of liturgy, this book is organized around blessings and vows associated with various marriage rites, one of which begins each section of the book. This structure, though, is no more linear than the course of married life; the concerns of each invocation resound with the promises of the ones that precede it and the ones that succeed it. Similarly, marriage as it is lived is not a series of graduated steps where one vow, like some finite task, is mastered and then left behind. The rejoicing of the wedding must be woven into the fabric of the everyday, as each member both individually and jointly seeks to integrate - to knit - their wills together, and to the will of the Lord. The texts within and across each section bear the circle metaphor out, for the meditations gathered
