The Sufi Message: Philosophy, Psychology and Mysticism v. 11 Hazrat Inayat Khan

There are three steps which lead the seeker to the alter of divine wisdom, philosophy, referring to the perception and study of things; psychology, learnt by thinking and feeling what is in our human nature and character; mysticism acquired and learnt through meditation and the study of the whole of life, both seen and unseen. First, aspects of the physical nature of life as perceived through the five senses are discussed. They are modern although they have been given as lectures in the twenties. Then the psychological aspects are covered, first focusing on the subjects of suggestion as a way of coping with the complications in life; Finally mysticism is presented under a surprising variety of subjects, thus illustrating the practicality and at the same time the aloofness of the spiritual path. After these teachings, sometimes called magnum opus of the master, you will find a rich collection of sayings under the title aphorisms.
